It turns out it is out of the President's office and not a particular program, weirdly. Learning more, seems like a useful enough collaboration. Next time we cross paths we can share more!

Thanks.

I was literally on a call with someone from EFC as your email came in. An important funder of China related work. I've had a few grants from them in the past. Happy to chat if it'd be helpful. Do you know which program within EFC the proposal is going to?

So sorry, it looks like somehow I sent you a partial draft of this email, where I had cut/paste my colleague's description. (His words re probability of success, etc.)

I was curious if you'd heard of them (Energy Foundation China) and if you had any advice/cautions/recommendations?

Again, so sorry for the bizarre email. I was having trouble with my internet earlier.

Would love any thoughts, but no worries if you're too busy!

Best wishes,
Kim

Hi Alex,

I've been approached by a group of researchers that are interested in preparing a proposal in response to a request from the Energy Foundation China (EFC) for a grant that would support research and policy outreach on climate-change policy and international trade. The project would focus on China – U.S. relations, but might also include the EU. This proposal has been solicited by the President of EFC and, in my view, has a reasonably high probability of success
