So sorry! Let me report that to the web manager, and we'll get back with a working one. I will let you know when to try again.
Thanks,
Paul

Thanks, Paul.
I cannot register on the website. The "I am not a robot" checkbox appears to be disabled.

Dear Inez,

It was a pleasure to speak with you on Tuesday, and I am pleased that you will join us for the in-person meeting of the Curriculum Advisory Committee of the Project in Washington, assuming your teaching obligations allow it. I promised some follow-up materials, noted below. You will receive an agenda in a few weeks, but as noted it will be at the Cosmos Club starting the evening of November 2 for drinks and dinner and then the business meeting November 3.

Our new resource website is at <https://cjp.eli.org>. I said you could reach your own module in one click, which I just discovered is only partly true. You will see it shown as you scroll down the page, but our web people ask that you register to reach it so that we can know who is visiting. I hope you approve of the layout—we are very pleased with it.

The provocative article I mentioned about 4 degrees and its implications for law and governance by Robin Kundis Craig and J.B. Ruhl is here <https://scholarship.law.vanderbilt.edu/faculty-publications/1251/>. We plan to include it among pre-reads for the meeting.

Finally, I mentioned Ed Maibach's work in climate communications. His profile is here: Edward Maibach | Center For Climate Change Communication. What's interesting is that his scholarly work on how to communicate to skeptical audiences is not very visible here, though I have heard him talk—and indeed he presented to one of our classes for mid-career scientists—on the topic. Regardless, he has a productive group under his leadership that publishes significant findings, cited on the home page.

Looking forward to seeing you in the fall. Thank you so much for all your support!
Best,
Paul
